These Grates have stood the test of seven years actual use, and are adopted by the most prominent manufacturers and navigation companies throughout the country.
Read the following letter from B. E. Moreland & Co.:
TITUSVILLE, Pa., September 21, 1870.
A. B. WILLIAMS, Esq., Titusville, Pa.—Dear Sir: We take pleasure in adding our names to the long roll of testimonials already given in advocacy of the merits of the Improved Double Ribbed Furnace Grates.
We have had them in constant use for a year, and during that time (al hough our furnaces represent more than five hundred feet of surface) we have not yet lost a single bar by burning out or warping.
Their advantages to us, in economizing fuel, ease of management and superior durability, warrant us in recommending them as fully up, if not superior, to the merits claimed for them. We would use no other. Truly yours,
B. E. MORELAND & CO.
The substitution of this Grate will generally enable the consumer to raise sufficient heat with nut coal, or even slack, when formerly the best lump was necessary; when, tan, bark, sawdust, etc., is burned it will be found on trial to be almost indispensable. No change in bearers required in any furnace. All orders will receive prompt attention.

The Texas Cattle Trade.

FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MANNER IN WHICH THE BUSINESS IS CONDUCTED.

From the Topeka, Kansas, Record.

The traffic in Texas cattle has, within the last few years, assumed a position among the leading interests of the country. Kansas is the chief grazing region and shipping headquarters—the great "outlet," we may say—for the immense herds of these cattle that are annually driven north from Texas, and eventually reach the Eastern and European markets. The trade here mainly concentrates at Abilene, on the Kansas Pacific Railway, 160 miles west of the Mississippi river, 440 miles from St. Louis, and 670 miles from Chicago. The grass and water in the vicinity of Abilene cannot be excelled on the continent; and the mildness of the climate and the absence of flies and mosquitoes contribute materially toward fattening cattle rapidly and at little risk. The facilities for shipping, and for the general transaction of business pertaining to the trade, are also first class; and there is little reason to doubt that Abilene will become, at no very distant day, the largest cattle market in the whole country.

Last year about 50,000 head of cattle were shipped eastward from Abilene within a period of three months, and about one-third as many more were sent forward from other points in the State.

During the present season the shipments so far have been heavier than in the corresponding months of last year; and the aggregate figures of 1869 will be materially increased. Already, since June 1, about 37,000 have been shipped eastward from Abilene alone, and 15,000 have gone West to Salt lake, to say nothing of the small lots sold to butchers and packers, and driven to different points in Kansas. About 10,000 heavy beeves are there at present for packing at Leavenworth, Kansas, Kansas City, and Chicago, and will be forwarded about the 10th of next month. Exclusive of this 10,000 there are in the vicinity for sale about 35,000 head of ordinary beef and stock cattle, and several thousand cows, calves, yearlings and two-years old. Purchasers can find at Abilene every age and condition of the cattle genus; from the choicest specimen of a full grown steer to the scrawniest scrub of a sucking calf. The total number of cattle of all kinds, both sold and remaining on hand, at Abilene, this year, can safely be put down at 150,000.

The cattle come principally from Northern Texas. They are bought there by the herd, at the following prices per head:

Beef cattle	$11.00
Milch cows	6.00
Three-year olds	7.00
Two-year olds	4.00
One-year olds	2.50

The average distance driven is about 700 miles; time consumed in driving, two months; cost of driving, $2 per head, exclusive of 20 per cent. risk from stampeding, stealing, &c. Most of the droves are brought through the Indian territory, on what is known as the "Chisholm trail." Droves are usually made up of equal numbers of grown steers, cows, and three, two or one-year olds. When only beef cattle are brought, the price is put higher—say $12 to $14 per head.

Arriving at Abilene in good order, a mixed drove is held at about the following figures:

Beef cattle	$20.00
Milch cows	12.00
Three year olds	10.00
Two-year olds	8.00
One-year olds	6.00

After being "grazed" through the summer, the same cattle are worth 20 per cent. more. Beef cattle, of average flesh, ready for market, are valued at $25.

The cattle sent to market usually average about 900 pounds, and not unfrequently go over 1,000. They sell in St. Louis and Chicago at an average of 8½ cents per pound—oftener above than below that price. Several sales were made in Chicago, last Saturday, on a dull market, at 5 cents, and a day or two before that, transactions were noted at 5¾ cents for 1,150 averages.

The largest portion of the Texas cattle, however, are shipped direct to New York and other Atlantic cities, where they are packed and sent on to Europe. The price in New York averages 8 cents per pound—native cattle selling at an average of 14 cents. This makes the value of a 900 pound steer, in the New York market, $72—or about double the St. Louis and Chicago value. The additional freight, however, very nearly covers the difference in quotations. The freight from Abilene to St. Louis or Chicago ("special rates") is $6 to $7 per head. Contracts are made by the car load—a car holding 20 cattle. The freight from Abilene to New York or Boston is nearly four times as much as to St. Louis or Chicago, and, in addition, a 20 per cent. transportation risk, growing out of the increased extent of the route and the greater time consumed in getting to market. The money actually invested in a Texas steer up to the time of his reaching St. Louis or Chicago is about $23; and he brings, on an average at 3½ cents per pound, just $31.50—leaving a profit to the seller on the total investment of $8.50, or about forty per cent. The same steer sent to New York or Boston will represent, on reaching there, about $55; and he sells in those markets for $72, average—giving but a trifle more profit than if sold in Western markets at prices one-half less. The gains of the "first hand" dealers may therefore be set down at not exceeding 30 per cent, all incidental and unavoidable risks being counted.

The bulk of the cattle held at Abilene are owned by what is called "the big cattle men," who usually have 5,000 to 10,000 each. Small dealers hold from 100 to 1,000 each. The largest dealers control the market, and there is a tacit understanding that they have the privilege of putting in any cattle they can find, at the prices received for their own—they getting $1 per head for making the sale. These large dealers keep a great many hands employed, who do the "herding," and who go around at the proper time and mark and brand all the calves they can find, for which last named service they receive fifty cents per head, in addition to their regular wages.

A strong effort has been made this season by the Union Pacific Railroad, to draw the drovers to Schuyler, Nebraska, instead of Abilene, but the undertaking has not yet been much of a success. The Union Pacific has reduced its freights considerably to attract the trade, but this reduction is more than balanced by the cost and risk of driving over the additional distance—some 1,200 miles—between Abilene and Schuyler. The only formidable rival of Abilene, at present, is Baxter Springs, on the Southern border of Kansas. The business men of Kansas City are interesting themselves in Baxter's behalf, and will probably succeed in diverting that traffic from Abilene—at least during the latter part of the season, when the grazing is better in the southern than in the northern part of the State. Many of the drivers are now making arrangements to bring through two droves a year—the first to Abilene, and the other to Baxter. Saline, Council Grove and two other towns West and South are also doing considerable to encourage the traffic. And of one thing we may reasonably rest assured: Kansas will continue to be the great centre of the Texas cattle trade—no matter whether the shipments are mostly made from one or two points, or are distributed among a half dozen or more towns in different sections of the State. Our advantages of all kinds are such that no region north or west of us can successfully compete with us for any considerable portion of the business, either at present or in the future.

Retiring from Business.

BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

We receive from New Jersey a question which we think of enough importance to answer:

"DEAR SIR: I would like your views, through the Ledger, relating to what age and financial condition in life a man should retire from business."

The great majority of them are not left to choose when or whether they shall retire from business. They earn their daily bread. The world is to them a treadmill, and they must keep stepping, or go under. Until the sexton helps them off the wheel, they must toil. But our correspondent, doubtless, means commercial "business." When should a merchant, a manufacturer, an operator in goods and stocks, retire from business?

The question may be answered in Yankee fashion. When should a clergyman retire from business? When should a lawyer or physician retire? People have a different impression about professions. They have an idea that a clergyman should stick to his business as long as his faculties hold out, if it be eighty years. But why should not a merchant? Oh, it may be said, a clergyman is not living for himself, but for others; whereas a merchant is living for his own benefit. But why should a Christian merchant feel at liberty to live for himself any more than a clergyman? Every honest calling has relations of benefit to the public, as well as to its occupant. Every pursuit has a private side and public side, a side of self-interest and a side of benevolence. The carpenter who builds good dwellings ought not to be working with his mind fixed exclusively on his own gains thereby, but upon the benefit which the whole community derive from his skill and industry. A well-built house will stand for scores and hundreds of years, protecting a happy family. Here all the events of life will be developed. And in like manner the artificers who produce the furniture and every article of use and convenience in the house, worked for their wages or profits, to be sure; but they worked even more for the comfort of the families who should benefit by their industry.

If, then, a clergyman should continue in his business through his whole life, or during his ability to work, on the ground that his business is a benevolent one, for the same reason every man in honest business should do the same.

We must discriminate between retiring from business and changing one's business.

A man may earn enough money as a merchant to enable him to spend his later years in literary pursuits, or some lighter or more agreeable way than that by which he earned his money. But if retiring from business means throwing up regular occupation, then, never retire! There is no greater mistake ever made by sensible men than that of supposing that, after an active life of from twenty to thirty years, they shall be happier in retiring from business, and in having nothing to do, or only some puttering around every day to make themselves think they are busy. Idleness, like every other trade, to be enjoyed, must begin early. A man who has worked thirty or forty years will find little enjoyment in idleness. Those men who retire from business in the prime of life, go on to "estates" or live for pleasure, get sick of their bargain speedily. The fact is, that working is the normal condition of man. The active use of our faculties, in some regular business, is a condition of happiness.

The question should be, not how soon may we cease from labor, but how may we longest continue to work.

Now we would say that men never should retire from business. Peculiar cases may require and justify a different course now and then. But the general idea that as soon as a man has amassed sufficient wealth to live comfortably he had better retire from active business, is likely to lead men to unhappiness. An old man who has nothing to do is seldom a happy man.

As to how much a man should amass before he begins to live on the interest of it, no one can answer for another. The stream that will run one mill easily will not even start another. Some men can live on a thousand a year more comfortably than others can on ten thousand. A man's family, his position in society, his own habits, will determine how large an income will be required on which to live comfortably.—New York Ledger.

The Diamond Fever.

CAPE COLONY CRAZY OVER THE CROP.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"The great diamond discoveries of Southern Africa," as they are called, are exciting some parts of the British dominions as much as the California gold field excited our people some years ago. The wonders related by Sinbad the Sailor seem to be eclipsed, according to some exuberant and enthusiastic writers. There is this difference between the diamond valley of fable and the diamond fields of fact, however, that whereas the former was inaccessible, the latter can be reached without much difficulty, except such as a stout heart and strong legs can overcome. A writer not far from the spot, says that Cape Colony is out of its senses, and the greater part of its junior male population are in motion—either on the "enchanted ground," or on their way to it.

The same scenes which form the traditional history of California are witnessed in the diamond regions of South Africa; reckless adventure, stories of sudden wealth, gambling, drinking and extravagance. The tract on which the diamonds are found is a wild region, as yet outside of any colonial jurisdiction. It is bordered on one of its triangular sides by the British possessions known as Cape Colony; on the second by the two little domains called the Orange Free State and the Trans-Vaal Republic. The third boundary is indefinite, for the precious pebbles are said to exist anywhere toward the Equator. The colonists of Cape Town are already calling upon the Home Government to "annex" the tract, and establish British rule. "Red tape" will probably not be so much in the way in this case as in the execution of neutrality laws; and the country will probably be first claimed with a wide margin, and the red tape afterward arranged at leisure. Meanwhile the "finders" have already extemporized a "Committee of Safety," and a "Miners' Government after American precedents. They claim also to have organized a force bearing twelve hundred muskets. This is proclaimed as a guard against the little republics above mentioned, which are under the control of Dutch colonists and their descendants.

The word "mine" does not seem to apply to this discovery, since no traces of a mine have as yet been discovered. "Gems are found," according to recent accounts, "glittering on the very surface," and the turning up of clay or gravel deposits a foot or two below the surface, in lucky spots, reveals more of the "glittering wealth." The process of searching, so far, seems to be entirely unskilled and haphazzard; and there is more than a possible chance that many finders and buyers may yet discover that many bits of crystal pocketed are not diamonds. But diamond merchants and dealers in gems are known to be in considerable force in the field, and men who were known to be poor have now large sums to their credit, the proceeds of their labor. All ordinary and useful industry seems to be disorganized throughout Cape Colony; picks, shovels, rakes, and washing-cradles are in demand. High and low, rich and poor, move for the fields in organized companies, upsetting all British distinctions of blood and birth. "The well-employed, the half-employed, and the unemployed are off alike. Good situations are thrown up every day." They go in companies of from four to sixteen, on foot, or on horseback, or by horse-cart, or mule-cart, or ox-wagon.

Time will show in what all this will result. The first statement must be taken with many grains of that more useful crystal than diamond, known as salt. But if diamonds should be discovered and shipped by the bushel, the chief appreciable effect upon the world would be a discount on the value of well-hoarded but nonessential ornaments. Gold is by many political economists held to be cheaper than before the California and Australian discoveries; but gold measures the price of everything else, and thus creates an equilibrium. And the increased use of precious metal in the arts operates to maintain its long-established value. Gems are of only limited demand in practical directions; and the result may be, if all the Cape Colonist reports are true, that pinchbeck watches can be sold for a song, "full-jewelled;" and that diamonds, heretofore the condensed form of wealth, may become like paste, not worth the gold they are set in.

A Sunny Front.

Such a farm house as I have described, says the author of "My Farm of Edgewood," should have, in all northern latitudes, a sheltered position and a sunny exposure. Of course, a situation convenient to the fields under tillage, and to other farm buildings, is to be sought, but beyond this no law of propriety, of good taste, or of comfort, is more imperative than shelter from bleak winds, and a frontage to the south. No neighbor can bring such cheer to man's door-step as the sun. There are absurd ideas afloat in regard to the front and back side of a house, which affect village morals and manners in a most base and unmeaning way. In half the country towns, and by half the farmers, it is considered necessary to retain a pretending front side upon some dusty street or highway, with tightly-closed blinds and bolted door; with parlors only ventured upon in an uneasy way, from month to month, to consult some gilt-bound dictionary or museum, that lies there in state like a king's coffin. The occupant, meantime, will be living in some back corner, slipping in and out at back doors, never at ease save in his most uninviting room, and as much a stranger to the blinded parlor, which very likely engrosses the best half of his house, as his visitor, the country parson. All this is as arrant a sham and affectation as the worst ones of the cities. It is true that every man will like to set aside a certain portion of his house for the offices of hospitality. But the easy and familiar hospitalities of a country village, or of the farmer, do not call for any exceptional stateliness. The farmer invites his best friends to his habitual living room; let him see to it then that this room is the sunniest, the most cheerful of the house. So his friends will come to love it, and he and his children to love it and to cherish it, so that it shall be the rallying point of the household affections through all time. No sea so distant but the memory of a cheery, sunlit home-room, with its pictures on the wall, and its flame upon the hearth, and the sunlit window, will pave a white path over the intervening waters, where tenderest fancies, like angels, shall come and go. There is deeper philosophy in this than may at first appear. Who shall tell us how many a break-down of a wayward son is traceable to the cheerless aspect of his home and fireside?

A Model Cow Stable.

Mr. Charles L. Sharpless, owner of the choicest herds of Jersey cattle in the country, thus describes the winter quarters of his cows in the Country Gentleman:

"The ground on which the building stands is about eighty feet square, and slopes gently to the southeast. On the rear, toward the northwest, is a hay-house, eighty by eighteen feet, the space under which is occupied by the cow-house under the west end and overshoot on the east, each forty feet long. The cows are arranged on plank floor, with gutter and four-foot walk behind them, and hay mangers and passage in front of them. They all face northwest, each having a space of four feet, with no divisions between them, and are kept in stanchions. In the rear are three doors to allow them to go out into the yard, and one at east end of walk to go under overshoot. The yard is about sixty-two by eighty feet, is sheltered on the northeast and southwest sides by low buildings, and on the southeast by a board fence four feet high. In the center of the yard is an octagonal inclosure of boards four feet high and twenty feet in diameter, into which all the manure of both stalls and yard is thrown as fast as delivered, so that the yard is kept perfectly clean. Over this yard is kept spread marsh, or salt hay about six inches in depth, so inviting that the cows can lie down in any part of it. While in the yard they are sheltered from all the cold winds, and from the southeast comes the morning sun as soon as risen. The overshoot furnishes shelter from the rain, and its western end, between the passage doors, is the water-trough, always full. There is a window on the southwest side of the west corner, to light their heads and the passage in front of them, and two windows in the rear. The hay-mangers are level with the floor, and large enough to hold easily five pounds of hay. Each has a lump of rock salt, and the meal is fed on the bottom. During all fair weather they are in the yard, except at meals. Thus they are bright, comfortable and thrifty.

The Maiden Miser.

A Poughkeepsie correspondent of the New York Herald reports that the case of Lochy Ostrom, Poughkeepsie's miser, who died in this place some time ago, is again commanding attention. It will be remembered that here is a romantic story. She was never married, and when she died she was seventy-seven years of age. When she was young she was considered handsome, and she moved in excellent society. While in her teens she became infatuated with a then Poughkeepsie lawyer named Gazely. An estrangement soon followed, however, and from thenceforth the two walked through life in a different direction. Lochy grew old, and her disposition soon changed. She became morose and conceived a disposition to hoard money. Up to the time of her death she had not attended church in twenty years. She hardly ever purchased anything to eat or wear, but always lived upon people with whom she was acquainted. When she died it was claimed that she left not a single blood relation behind, and her fortune was inventoried at $15,000. Upon proper application, letters of administration were granted to Walter D. Wheeler, one of her creditors, and up to yesterday that gentleman had supreme control of her effects. It appears, however, that there is to be a fight for the miser's money, and rich developments are expected.

The Dress of Children.

Now that winter is approaching, it behooves parents more than ever to see that their children are clothed in such a manner as to protect them from the inclemency and sudden changes of the weather. The chief cause of infantine mortality, in addition to foul air, or too rich or too poor food, is the false pride of many mothers. Children are killed by the manner in which they are dressed as certainly as by any other cause. In our changeable climate children of the most tender age are left with bare arms and legs, and with low necked dresses. The mothers, in the same dress, would shiver and suffer with cold, and expect a fit of sickness as the result of their culpable carelessness. And yet the mothers could endure such a treatment with far less danger to health and life than their tender infants can. A moment's reflection will indicate the effects of this mode of dressing, or rather want of dressing, on the child. The moment the cold air strikes its bare arms and legs, the blood is driven from these extremities to the internal and more vital organs. The result is congestion, to a greater or less extent of these organs. In warm weather the heat will bring affections of the bowels, and this mode of dressing may be reckoned one of the chief causes of summer complaints. But in cold weather congestion and inflammation of the brain and lungs are the result. It is painful to see children thus dressed like victims for sacrifice.

A movement is on foot in Louisiana to induce white farm laborers to immigrate into that State from Canada.

The live stock trade of Baltimore amounts to nearly $10,000,000 a year.

General Einsthas has been appointed to command of the army of the East, in place of General Neambeal, who was compelled to resign on account of ill health.

Paris Starving.

News from Paris received by the way of Prussian headquarters before that city is quite serious. French prisoners recently captured report the troops behind the fortifications receive only half a pound of meat twice a week. Many French women and children from Paris approach the Prussian lines, and though they are warned they will be shot, they attempt to come nearer, rather courting instant death than to suffer starvation in the city. The rule to exclude all strangers from Paris, and to prevent the escape of citizens is rigidly enforced.

Four thousand French officers taken prisoners at Metz have asked permission of the Prussian military authorities, through Prince Frederick Charles, to keep their swords.

The railway from Chalons to Paris, by way of Soissons, is restored, and the Prussians are now using it as a means of transporting troops and supplies.

856,000 Prussians.

LONDON, Oct. 31.

A Cologne dispatch yesterday says: Prussia and the North German Congederation have furnished 740,000 troops for the present war and the States of South Germany 116,000, and nearly all are now on French soil. They are expected to complete the conquest of France in a short winter campaign.

TOURS, Oct. 31.

Madame Bazaine left last evening.

An official dispatch received by the ministry to-day from Beauno yesterday announces the Prussians have occupied Digon. The Prussians were 12,000 strong and well provided with artillery. They attacked the city at 9 a. m, on Sunday and the bombardment was continued till nearly nightfall. The town was not fortified and the commander of the French not being able to resist with his small force was compelled to retreat.

Fighting near Paris.

VERSAILLES, Oct. 30.

On Friday last the French drove back the German outposts at Le Bourget, a mile or so east of Fort St. Denis, on the boundary of Paris. On the evening of that day the French were discovered in force in occupation of the position they had forfeited to-day. Therefore, the second division of the Guards attacked the point, and after a hot and brilliant fight the French were driven from the position, back behind their fortifications. Thirty officers and about one thousand two hundred men were taken prisoners. The Prussian losses are acknowledged to be quite heavy, as the French fought behind earthworks.

Bourbaki's Proclamation.

TOURS, Oct. 31.

Gen. Bourbaki, in view of the capitulation of Metz, has issued a proclamation to the soldiers of Lille, dated yesterday. He says he has been called upon by the Minister of War to command the army of the north. His purpose was to organize immediately a Corps d'Arme, well provided with materials of war, to go to the aid of the besieged fortresses, and he would give his best attention, and his life if need be, to the work for which the government and all citizens must now prepare, namely: The national defense! Concord and confidence must now be had. The soldiers and citizens might count upon his patriotism. The endeavors of his life belonged to the common work, to punish the enemy and avenge France.

MARSAILLES, Oct. 30.

Upon receiving news of the capitulation of Metz, a patriotic demonstration was made. All public places were closed.

TOURS, Oct. 31.

The journals to-day announce that should Prussia succeed in cutting the railway communication with the North of France, vessels of war will carry the mails between France and England.

Bombardment of Paris To-day.

LONDON, Oct. 31.

The Germans around Paris are holding solemn religious services to-day. The bombardment of the city commences to-morrow.

Deploring the War.

At a meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce to-day, the chairman deplored the continuance of the war, which he hoped would now be brought to an end by the efforts of Thiers. His mission to Versailles would certainly result in peace. As a compensation for the ills suffered in consequence of the war by England, there was an influx of American visitors, who otherwise would be traveling on the continent. There has also been a vast increase in business orders, while at the same time cotton was declining. He advocated a petition against the entry monopoly.

New Cabinet.

LISBON, Oct. 31.

A new cabinet has been formed under the presidency of Avila, as follows: Avila, Foreign Affairs; Bishop Uziah, Interior and Public Instructions; Carralho, Finance; Davige, War; Gamber, Marine.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 31.

Prussia has promised Denmark to fulfill the stipulation of the treaty of Prague, in relation to North Schlieswig. Hence the King in his last speech was enabled to refer to the future with confidence.

Persecuting the Christians.

LONDON, Oct. 31.

The persecution of Christians has been renewed in Damascus, and so great is the irritation of the natives against them that a general massacre is feared.

The Doomed City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.

A special to the Telegram dated Versailles 3rd, says: Formal notice of the capitulation of Metz has been sent to Paris under a flag of truce. The King of Prussia has announced his determination to immediately bombard the city. He considers the enormous number of Pairsians who must invariably be subject to all the privations of hunger and suffering consequent upon the long siege of Metz, would, under these circumstances, be more mercifully dealt with by forcing an entrance for them into Paris, and it would be a proper tribute of respect to those who fought best for France. A large number of reinforcements of Prussian troops reached the investing lines to-day.

Forced to Disgorge.

SAARBRUCK Oct. 30.

Previous to the capitulation of Metz Bazaine had buried in the earth a caisse de larmee containing 40,000,000 francs in gold and 10,000,000 francs in silver. The Germans forced him to reveal the locality.

Droves of sheep cover the road approaching Metz. The National Ambulance Society of England are forwarding heavily laden wagons of salt provisions. A large number of American surgeons flocked to the neighborhood of Metz and Saarbruck and are rendering the most important service to the wounded of both nations.

LONDON, Oct. 31.

It is generally believed in the Stock Exchange that Paris will offer a determined resistance to the besiegers.

Small Pox.

The small pox is raging with violence at Amiens. The disease was brought by fugitives from Paris.

In Poland the Jews openly manifest sympathy for France, and in a more decided manner than other natives of Poland. The authorities are alleged to forbid public prayers for the success of the French cause.

Agitation at Tours.

TOURS, Oct. 31.

Prefects and military commanders of a large number of Departments have telegraphed to the Minister here expressing the utmost indignation at the surrender of Metz, and a determination to continue the war to the last extremity. The agitation here is extreme, and rumors circulating all day contribute to increase the public anxiety. Some assert that peace has been signed without reference to the Tours government, that Bazaine has been acting in accordance with instructions from Napoleon, and that Changarnier, refusing to surrender, took command of the troops in Metz, and will cut his way out. In nearly all the towns of the south and west, the National Guards and citizens have made imposing demonstrations in favor of the Republic.

LONDON, Oct. 31.

Late advices from China state that the Christian missionaries whose lives were threatened at Fungehow, have been relieved.

Movements of Troops.

A Tribune cable dispatch dated London, Oct. 31, says: A special correspondent writes from Tours, 28th: I have just returned from the Le Maus. There are no troops there, but the Mobiles and Nationale Guardes are en route for Rennes, Kerarty's headquarters. Every town and village on the road is filled with soldiers. Arms seem to be abundant, including chassepots, Remington and Snyders. The army of the Loire will pass through Touis. A large infantry force arrived today. Troops from Salbois are rapidly joining the Sixteenth Corps and advancing toward Vendome. Their object is inexpliable.

Paris.

A special correspondent writes from Berlin, October 29: An officer in Moltke's staff writes me from Versailles, on the 22d. When the Paris affair will be ended, no mortal man can certainly tell. My personal calculation is in a fortnight or three weeks, but I may be mistaken. At all events we shall do the business thoroughly, having to be sure of hunger for our best ally.

The Captures at Metz.

The Metz capitulation includes 67 infantry regiments, 13 battalions of foot chasseurs, 10 foot and department battalions, 36 cavalry regiments, namely, 10 cuirrasseurs, 1 guard, 11 dragoons and 2 lancers, 3 hussars, 3 chasseurs and 3 chasseurs d'Afrique. Also 6 department squadrons, 115 field batteries, 17 batteries of mitrailleuses, 69 eagles belonging to the infantry, of which were 2 formerly taken at Mars La Tours, and 46 cavalry eagles, including the garrison. The surrendered army originally comprised 221 batalions of infantry and 162 squadrons of horse. The original numerical strength was 210,000 infantry and 21,450 cavalry, 690 guns and mitrailleuses, besides the 3 Marshals, Bazaine, Canrobart, and Le Bouf, and the three Corps commanders, Frossard Decane and L'Admerault. There are forty division Generals, and one hundred Brigadiers. Ninety thousand of sound prisoners have been sent to North Germany, and fifty thousand to South Germany. The sick and wounded have been distributed in the same proportion.

Garibaldi.

A special correspondent of the Tribune, who has joined Garibaldi, writes from Dijon, 26th: The staff are very anxious about the position of Garibaldi, who risks too much. As usual he was nearly made a prisoner yesterday. The franc-tireurs demand Garibaldian officers. Many Garibaldians are waiting for leave to come from Italy and will probably arrive soon. The Italians from Alexandria, Egypt, have formed a legion and came here last night armed and equipped. The Marsailles legion also arrived armed with minnie rifles. The frontier native Aux left Dijon yesterday to join Garibaldi under Lavalle, a Colonel of Gens d'Armes and a famous Republican. Arms and ammunition are greatly wanting. Erba has but seven rifles and forty-five rounds of ammunition for a whole battalion. The French generally receive the Garibaldians with great kindness, expecting much aid.

A correspondent with Garibaldi writes on the 27th from St. Jean De Dole: I arrived here last night. I have not seen Garibaldi since the eve of Montaina. The alteration in him is striking. His fingers are bent with rheumatism, his body is thin, and his face is as calm and bright as ever. We had two hours talk. His position is peculiar. He arrived at Tours simultaneously with Gambetta. The latter was not over pleased with the ovations to Garibaldi. They had an interview there. Garibaldi wrote: "I see I have made a mistake; I am useless, and shall return." But that would not have suited the people, so they gave him command of the Department of the Jura. He is reported to have 10,000 men, but in reality, he has not 5,000, and they are Spanish, Italians and French—a mongrel crew. Cambriets, at Besancon, has 35,000 men. Garibaldi has with him his son-in-law, Couses, chief of staff. Basso, his secretary, and others, are arriving, but most of his best officers are not here yet. I said: "General, if you call, they will come." He replied in the gravest voice: "That is what I cannot do. It would be too heavy a responsibility. Each must come on his own account." Yesterday he had decided to return to Ancanges, but during the night there came news that 600 Prussians were concentrated so Garibaldi left word that he should stay. He expected every day to be attacked. I do not see what is to stop the Prussians if they attack. Beyond a doubt Garibaldi's coming is a mistake. The jealousy of the French Generals is such that he can do nothing, but we are here and there is no retreat.

The Herald's special, dated London, Oct. 31, says: A letter dated Versailles, Oct. 25, says: "It has rained for two days, and the ground is slippery and muddy. Sorties are supposed to be impossible at present. Since Friday not a gun has been heard, and perfect quietnes has prevailed."

A Fight with Franc-Tireurs.

Your correspondent at Brussels, writing on the 29th instant, gives the following account of a fight by franc-tireurs: I had left Bethel at 6 a. m. of the 26th, and gone fifteen miles when on approaching the small village of Launers I discovered a line of 120 wagons loaded with provisions for the army, and some horses standing near and others lying dead on the ground, the work of the franc-tireurs. The convoy being unsufficiently guarded they had played sad havoc. At the same moment I saw the smoke of an engine approaching on the road repaired by the Prussians between Sedan and Bethal. The franc-tireurs evidently expecting the train had placed obstructions on the track and lay concealed on high wooded ground two hundred yards distant. On meeting the obstructions twenty cars were thrown from the track, and the engine broke loose. The train was filled with Prussians, and escorted by fifty Prussian soldiers, under command of a captain. The 300 Franc-Tireurs, apparently astonished to see this number of soldiers pour out unhurt, fell back hurriedly after an ill-directed fire. The Prussians did not pursue, but remained with the train. The Franc-Tireurs encouraged, returned to the attack. The Prussians availing themselves of the cover of the cars, poured a well directed fire among their ranks, and the French were again driven to flight, leaving ten or twelve of their number on the ground. The second attack resulted the same, when suddenly two German companies, a guard in the neighborhood, hearing the firing appeared on the scene. The franc-tireurs fled, losing sixteen killed and twenty-two prisoners, nine of whom were wounded. Some of the prisoners were uniformed and others wore blouses. The Prussians lost one killed and two wounded. The firing of the French was very bad. Six dead were subsequently found among the wagons previously attacked; there were three soldiers and three drivers. Such scenes are of daily occurrence.

Attempt to Assassinate King William.

The Herald's cable dispatch, dated Berlin, Oct. 31, says: A report is current here that an attempt was made yesterday at Versailles on the life of King William. The King was unhurt, but General Von Roon, who stood near, was wounded.

Lord Granville's proposition was for an armistice to enable the election to be held only, and did not involve peace. The Paris Government does not desire an election, but the Prussian Government will require one if an armistice is granted, and it will not be granted for any other purpose.

TOURS, Oct. 30.

Garibaldi has summarily expelled from Dale the JesuitFather in charge of the school of Notre Dame de Mont Rollard. The proceeding has excited the most intense indignation. The five companies of Alsacians refuse to serve under him, and threaten to shoot him.

The Storm on the Lakes.

KINGSTON, Oct. 31.

During the severe east gale last night, the schooner William John, with 4,000 bushels of wheat from Caltourg, for Edwardsburgh, went ashore. The vessel and cargo will be a total loss. Insured. The tug Sarah broke from her moorings and went ashore on Point Frederick.

BUFFALO, Oct. 31.

A terriffic gale has prevailed here since last evening from the southeast, and the water of the lake is higher than at any time this season. The tug Harrison foundered at 2 o'clock this morning off Sturgeon Point. The crew was saved by the tug Compound, Captain Davenport.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31.

A terrible storm prevailed last night. The propeller Neptune, with two lumber barges in tow, cast off the barges, and in making port beat against the dock until she sank. The Neptune belongs to the Erie Transportation Company, and hails from Detroit. No sailing vessels are reported as wrecked. A considerable portion of Winslow's brick block on River street was blown down.

ERIE, PA., Oct. 31.

The Canadian schooner Brittania, Capt. H. Brock, bound from Vermillion to Toronto, with a cargo of limestone, went ashore here near the peninsula lighthouse, this morning. Alonzo Grant, one of her crew, was injured in the gale, and his leg has been amputated. It is not expected he will live. Four others of the crew succeeded in reaching the shore early this morning. The captain and one man clung to the rigging for four hours, but were finally rescued by the tug Dragon. The Brittania sunk in twenty feet of water. The captain and crew lost everything. Alex. McBride, of Port Barnwell, is the owner of the vessel. She is supposed to be insured.

The schooner Elyria, owned and commanded by Capt. Reed, of Elyria, Ohio, went ashore in the gale last night on the peninsula, opposite the city. The crew clung to the bowsprit and rigging all night, and were not rescued till this afternoon. The revenue cutter Commodore Perry, was swamped in going to their aid. Two seamen, named Isaac Smith and John Boyce, were drowned in the breaker. Others of the crew were picked up by the tug Tillinghast.

A bark in distress drifted past here this morning. The Perry has gone in pursuit. The gale exceeds in violence any known for years, and other disasters are feared.

From New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.

The number of emigrants arrived at this port the past week is 1,254, a smaller number than has arrived in any previous week for many months.

The steamships Deutschland from Bremen, the Columbia and Iowa from Glasgow, and the Malta and Abyssinia from Liverpool, all carrying passengers, have arrived.

The gale last night and to-day occasioned no material damage to property, but several lives were lost in the bay to-day by swamping boats. The rumors that General Pleasanton has been tendered the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and that warrants have been issued against the County Clerk, Senator Morton and Alderman Coman for alleged conspiracy in the old election frauds, are authoritatively pronounced untrue.

The suit of the Erie Company to recover six millions of dollars from Vanderbilt has gone over till December.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.

A dispatch is just received by the President, announcing the death, this morning, of Governor Shaffer, of Utah.

The President to-day appointed Robert N. Jewett, of Mississippi, United States Consul at Canton, and Horce H. Houghton, of Illinois, Consul at Penanbuco.

The Supreme Court met to-day, all the justices present except Chase and Nelson, and Justice Clifford presiding. The commissions of Attorney General Ackerman and Solicitor General Barstow, were presented and read, and the oath of office administered to Clement H. Hill, new Assistant Attorney General. A resolution of the Philadelphia bar, on the death of Judge Grier, was presented and ordered placed on the records, and in further testimony of respect the court adjourned.

There was a pleasant parting ineerview between the officers of Internal Revenue Bureau and Commissioner Delano, at which mutual kind wishes for the future were exchanged.

Chief Justice Chase in a letter dated 22nd inst., says "I walked this morning some twenty minutes and shall ride in an hour or two, but I do not regain my strength as rapidly as I hoped." The letter was written by his clerk as usual but was signed by himself, the writing showing no unusual sign of feebleness.

The President has expressed his readiness to appoint an Israelite to the office of an Indian Superintendent.

The President gave a state dinner tonight. All the Cabinet, except Robenson, who is absent from the city, were present. Also Senators Edmunds and Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Casy and Mrs. Overill Grant. Gen. Cox was invited, but was not present, having previously completed arrangements to leave for Ohio in the early afternoon train.

Another Hurricane.

HAVANA, Oct. 31.—via LAKE CITY.

Another dreadful hurricane occurred yesterdry. It was the severest storm ever known. At the west end of the Island and along the south coast towns were inundated, crops damaged or destroyed, railroads submerged and telegraph wires prostrated. Matanzas again suffered terribly. As far as known no lives were lost.

Insurrectionists Shot.

Late advices from Martinique announce that the French authorities have already shot six of the ringleaders in the recent insurrection, and 100 more have been arrested and are liable to be shot. The opinion is gaining ground that the rebellion was instigated by the Prussians.

The Recent Hurricane.

Advices from Cardinas state that the loss of life in that city from the hurricane was quite small, but the destruction of property very great. All the warehouses were destroyed and a majority of vessels in port at the time dismantled and wrecked. The loss will reach a million dollars. As far as known no lives were lost from American vessels either at Mantanzas or Cardinas. Five men were arrested at Mantanzas for stealing property exposed by the hurricane, court martialed and shot.

PETROLEUM MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD, TITUSVILLE, October 31, 1870—9 P. M.

There was little activity in the market to-day, and though prices upon the Upper Creek were unchanged, the feeling upon the Lower road was a little off, the market in this locality being dull and with few transactions, buyers and sellers being apart in their views. $2.95 and $3.00 was offered upon the lower road, with sellers at $3 02½ and $3.05, and at $3.10 and $3.15 for gravity. Upon the Upper road $2.90 was the buying and $2.95 the selling price. A settlement of 3,000 bbls. B. O. all the year, was made upon the Upper road at $300, and the difference paid. Outside markets were dull and weak at the close.

OIL TERRITORY AND LEASES.

The attention of oil operators and the public generally is called to the following list of CHOICE OIL TERRITORY, LEASES and INTERESTS situated in the LUBRICATING DISTRICT of Franklin and vicinity.

The situation of the following land can be seen by refering to Beers' Atlas Map of the Oil Regions.

No. 19--The Keely Farm.

One hundred and seven acres, situated on Patchel run, about four miles from Franklin, will be sold at a low-down price, to close up company accounts.

2. The J. J. Blakely Farm.

Ninety acres adjoining the Galloway Farm, on the northeast. Good house and barn, situated between the Kunkle wells, on Two Mile Run, and the best wells at Franklin. Will be sold at a reasonable price.

3. The Snyder Farm,

Containing 175 acres, house, barn and orchard, situated one and one-half miles northeast from the Egbert Hill and in the belt of the best oil district. Will be sold without reserve at a low figure.

4. The Undivided One-Half, in fee, of Eighteen Acres,

Situated in the rear of the Point at Franklin; producing wells adjoining; wells going down all around; depth required about 400 feet.

8. 50 Acres in Jackson Township.

Good Farming land, and near producing wells. Will be sold in lots to suit purchasers.

11th. Ninety Acres

In free in Pine Grove township; part of the Stover track adjoining property of Munhall & Diamond; at $35 per acre. Well going down within ten rods.

13. The Twomey Farm,

Fifty acres on a branch of Two-mile Run, adjoining the KUNKLE WELLS. Good timber, and is as good oil land as there is in Sugar Creek township. Will be sold at a bargain if applied for soon.

14. The W. W. Huff Farm.

106 acres, opposite Reno, in a direct line between Shaffer Run and Foster. The same line extended strikes the Angell well and Scrubgrass. Its location makes it a very desirable point for operators. It will be sold at reasonable rates.

No. 15--The Espy Farm--55 Acres,

Situated on Patchell run, about four miles from Franklin. PRICE $4,500.

No. 16--The Stockin Farm--109 Acres.

Near the Shippen Wells. Good oil territory, and will be SOLD AT A LOW FIGURE.

17.--The Collum Farm.

A tract of land in fee, containing 225 acres, 75 of which are bottom lands, situated in Oakland and Plum townships, on Sugar Creek, 4½ miles from from Oil Creek, east and west branches of Sugar Creek running through it. Recent developments make this property admirably adapted to oil purposes. Will be sold very low for cash.

18.--The Worden Farm.

122 acres situated on Sugar Creek, 1½ miles from the mouth, house and barn on the premises; it adjoins producing territory, and will be sold cheaper than any land on the Creek, if applied for soon. Operators will find it to their interest to examine this land before purchasing elsewhere.

DEPOT IMPROVEMENTS.—At Oil City the O. C. & A. R. R. Co. is raising the depot and the entire platform surrounding it, which will bring it much nearer a level with the car steps. They are also laying a switch next to their new freight depot, which is situated in the point between their main track and the A. & G. W. R'y.

RAILROAD FREIGHTS.—It will be seen by announcement in another column that our railroad has made very considerable reductions in their freight tariff. A car load of coal from Corry to Titusville is now brought for $10. Heretofore it has been $15, and formerly was $17. A very great reduction has been made, as will be seen by comparing present with former rates.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF. — Yesterday morning Senior Weinburg entered a complaint before Justice Strouse, against three boys, for malicious and wilful mischief in disturbing the congregation on Sunday. One of them could not be found, another was discharged; the evidence was clear against the third, and he was held to await the decision of the Justice, which will be given on Friday evening.

PERSONAL.—Mr. George M. Lyon, the gentleman who engaged Nasby to lecture, was subjected to a very abusive assault from the new Democratic paper yesterday, because he didn't pay his advertising bill at the office in advance. Mr. Lyon would doubtless have paid the bill if it had been presented, or had he known their pecunary distress. He has lived more years in Titusville than his accusers have months and has always sustained an unblemished reputation.

WILLIAM MASON EVANS, A. M.—Mr. Evans, whose former connection was with the drama in this city, will be remembered by our citizens with pleasure, will give his inimitable entertainment this evening, entitled, "Poetic Pot-Pourri," in which he has achieved a brilliant reputation in New York and other Eastern cities. He is spoken of everywhere as an artist without a rival in the delivery of some of the finest pieces in the language—his rendition of "Poe's Bells" being worth the price of admission. The programme will consist of various poetic selections, largely humorous, and one of the prominent features will be his representation of the great trial scene from Pickwick papers, by Dickens, in which the New York Herald claims he is superior to the great author himself. We trust our citizens will turn out en masse to welcome him in his new sphere, as well as to enjoy one of the most delightful entertainments now before the public.

GAS WELLS—Messrs. Bryan, Dillingham & Co. intend to sink a well on their premises, in rear of the Petroleum Iron Works, for obtaining natural gas, for fuel and illuminating purposes. The success which has attended similar operations in Erie, has been quite remarkable, and manufacturers generally have adopted this system as an invaluable auxiliary to their industrial enterprises. Not only are the iron works and foundries run and illuminated by natural gas from these artesian wells, but a sufficient quantity is obtained to illuminate the streets, and the old method of supplying artificially from the gas works is to give place to the new method. We believe the same experiment will have a success here. The Hermann well, sunk five years ago near the railroad crossing on Franklin street, had "a good show" of gas, and another on the Shugart lot, had the same indications. A gas well at the Petroleum Iron Works capable of supplying all the fuel required would prove invaluable to the owners, and the same system would soon be generally adopted for cheapening the cost of manufactures. The result of the experiment will be looked for with general interest.

Fearful Gale on Lake Erie—Loss of Life and Vessels.

We learn from an eye witness, who arrived from Erie last evening, that one of the most violent gales ever experienced prevailed on the south shore of Lake Erie on Sunday night last, resulting in the loss of several vessels and many lives. The gale commenced from the S. S. W. to the N. W., about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and blew with increasing violence all night. In the morning, several vessels were descried wrecked, two of them on the north shore of Presque Isle, and one on the south side of the sand bar, running east of the Island. A barge and a schooner were also discovered out on the Lake to the east, in a helpless condition, in the trough of the sea. The wind carried them soon out of sight, and beyond doubt they both either foundered or were driven on the south shore. The schooner was dismasted. It is supposed that the barge was a lumber barge from Saginaw or an iron barge from Escanaba. Early in the morning, as soon as the condition of the vessel was observed, measures were taken to render all possible relief. The tug T. D. Dale and the Tillinghast succeeded at an early hour in reaching the schooner which had sunk inside of the sandspit and in rescuing all on board, five in number. The sea made a clean breach over the vessel, and they were holding on the rigging. They were all chilled through with exposure, and one of them had a leg broken from a falling spar, which rendered immediate amputation necessary. Attention was then directed to the rescue of the men on the other vessel, beached on the North shore of the peninsula opposite Misery Bay.

The revenue cutter Perry sent out one of her life boats in tow of the tug Dale. Before reaching the wreck, the boat was swamped, and two of the crew drowned; the other four of the crew were picked up by the tug. When our informant left efforts were being made to cross the narrow neck of land with the life-saving apparatus, because the sea was too rough to admit of rounding the island, but the result we are not able to state. In the vessel referred to, six men were hanging to the rigging with a life or death grasp, in anxious suspense over the terrible fate which threatened them. Still another vessel was ashore further up the Island, but no particulars can be given as to her condition or fate. Great excitement was occasioned in Erie by the spectacle of these shipwrecks and the shores were lined by an anxious throng of people.

We refer the reader to our dispatches of this morning for further particulars of this disaster.

Nasby "In Search of the Man of Sin."

A lecture by "Nasby" every winter seems to be a matter of course, and last evening he appeared before a Titusville audience for the third time. As a lecturer, "Nasby" seems to be a general favorite with the American public, always exacting and often fickle. "Nasby" will hold his place on the lyceum, as long as he shall be willing to lecture. He is an original thinker, as well as wit. Men like his homespun, quaint philosophy, half jest and half earnest, and then he is a writer of good English, which is no common merit. It is doubtful, however, if he will not soon give up lecturing. He has already lectured 200 nights in a year, from Bangor to St. Paul, and probably would find it more congenial to give his exclusive attention to his paper, the Toledo Blade, which has now attained a circulation for its weekly edition of 90,000.

Mr. Locke's lecture last evening was not partizan, but treated men of all parties impartially, and from an independent stand-point.

Notwithstanding the excessively disagreeable weather, rain overhead and mud underfoot, he was greeted with one of the best audiences of the season.

He began by saying that he did not wish to be considered egotistic, for of all junior blemishes in human nature, egotism was to his mind most objectionable. Any personification of the capital I was an unmixed nuisance to society at large, and a particular and especial nuisance to all with whom he came in contact. The honesty that vaunts itself will bear watching; the man who blows his own trumpet plays a solo. Honest merit is always retiring and shrinking, which explains the cause of his (the speaker's, being so little known. Yet this was one of the times when a man may properly speak of himself, and he would do so as briefly and delicately as possible. He knew of no one who had more qualities to be commended and fewer to be condemned, than himself. He commenced being good at an early age, and built himself up on the best models. When he was an infant he read the affecting story of George Washington and his little hatchet, and not to be outdone by George, he seized an axe, cut down the best cherry tree in his father's garden, dug up the roots and burned the branches, and then went skating on Sunday that he might confess the two sins at once, and be wept over and forgiven on account of his extreme truthfulness. The experiment was not a success. He was at once interviewed by his father, who remarked that he would rather have him tell a thousand lies than to cut down his favorite cherry tree, and he accordingly cut him (Nasby) into a state of exasperating rawness.

The speaker was born in Maine—all the wise men come from the East. In proof of his acquired wisdom he cited the fact that he went to Indiana a married man, and after a residence of two years returned with the same wife; went to the far west, and came back without investing in corner lots. He was a friend of humanity; could weep at sight of distress like a hydraulic ram; no man living could shed more tears over the woes of humanity, and no man had collected more money of his neighbors to relieve those woes. That he was a patriot he had proved by his not volunteering in the late war after he was drafted, but by sending a substitute—for he wanted only good men at the front.

He had lived for some time in Vermont, where he was a man of some note. He dwelt all alone with his books and his virtues; farming upon a stone quarry, selling thousand dollar sheep and early potatoes to western farmers, soliciting for a theological seminary, lecturing on temperance, organizing Sunday schools, and selling washing-machines between times. He felt that he was himself devoid of sin, though he was equally well convinced that the rest of mankind was going to perdition. He therefore determined to reform the world, and deliberately left his home and wandered out in search of the man of sin. Not to the islands of the sea, for the missionaries convey to them the catechism and uncomfortable pantaloons, while civilization provides rum, which, to their untutored stomachs, is lightning—so that those not converted by the one are killed by the other. The islanders are provided for. To Europe? To Boston? No. He who goes in search of sin purchases a ticket to New York, where he finds the article in its native fierceness—not original sin, but an improved article. "Show me the largest thing you have in wickedness," said he to his friend, who at once flipped a copper to determine whether he should introduce him to a Wall street gold speculator, a railroad manager, a Democratic politician, or a burglar. The railroad manager won the flip. He was found at 10 in the morning managing a road to which he had not the ghost of a title; at 11, lunching with ballet girls and their hangers on employed at his own theatre, (purchased, by the way, with the earnings of the road which the stockholders did not get); at 12, ruining a score of brokers who trusted to his word; in the afternoon, dining with ballet girls and professional bullies; and going to bed in the morning to recuperate for the next day. This man was a rascal born; was rotten from top to bottom. His lightest offense would, in a decently governed community, have consigned him to the penitentiary or the gallows. Yet he is courted and feasted and flattered; statesmen sit at his table, judges lunch with him, and New York feels honored by his citizenship.

In the course of his search for the man of sin, Nasby was presented to such specimen bricks as Vanderbilt, and James Gordon Bennett, and Fernando and Ben Wood, and the Hon. John Morrissey. The latter advised him to call on John Allen, "the wickedest man," and to explore the Peter Funk auction shops, but he declined. He was in search of big scoundrels, not small ones. He found life insurance directors, with princely apartments, lunching off of gold plate and drinking French wines—the whole country footing the bills. He saw a distinguished bruiser in training for a Congressional nomination, who had committed a magnificent burglary and killed his man in a bar-room. Nasby got out of New York. In three days more he would have stolen something, or been capable of lying like a telegraph dispatch.

He went to Washington and saw cadetships sold by Hon. M. C.'s who were in arrears for board. "Go," said a virtuous member, "go and buy a cadetship, but demand proof that your son will be appointed before you pay your money." He met Judges from the Southern States, whose only knowledge of criminal law had been derived from standing in the prisoner's dock. He was taken twice for a correspondent, and offered a hundred dollars each time to write a speech for a member who was never sober enough to do it for himself. He saw honest men voting away millions of acres to public corporations, and then moving into gorgeous mansions, maintaining coaches and liveries, on a salary of $5,000 a year. It is cruel injustice to call a man stupid who goes to Washington poor and returns rich.

The speaker then briefly reviewed some of the political measures of the last and preceding Congress, the causes of the failure of the Jenckes Civil Service bill, and the efforts to repeal the franking privilege, and severely animadverted upon the partizanship and selfishness that characterized so much of our public legislation. Debilitated with the quantity and quality of the depravity he had taken in, Mr. Nasby fled to Trenton, N. J., to recuperate. To his unspeakable horror, he saw a member of the Legislature rise in his seat and ask in plain, unvarnished English, how many dollars they would take to kill the bill under discussion. One member, who had been offered only $100 favored the bill; he was offered $250, $500, and finally $1,000, when he was fully and hopefully converted to the opposition, and voted against the bill with thundering emphasis. "But are not the perpetrators of all this iniquity brought to account?" he asked. "No!" was the answer, "firm in the belief that mankind is divided into two classes, rascals and ninnies, they march on confident and secure. They fleece the ninnies and divide with the rascals, which is the sum total of New Jersey legislation."

I had expected, said the lecturer, to browse about the world, taking a nip here and a nip there of iniquity, but found it everywhere—the man of sin honored in the business circles of New York, honored and applauded in the National capital, in the State capitals. He was introduced as a merchant, as a railroad manager, as a banker, as a representative. I found him in the Senate, in the Cabinet, on the bench, in both branches of a State Legislature. I found him everywhere.

Mr. Nasby then directs his attention to the ladies, and their reform conventions, the extravagance of fashion, and the shams of society, which he handled with due severity. At length the tired pilgrim returns to his own home, to find there under his very nose almost every sin that had startled him abroad—not excepting political iniquity; for Leatherlungs, who was running for office deposited $100 at Jones' doggery; one man received $50 to keep the Irish laborers in Johnson's stone quarry drunk till after they had voted; another $100 for carriages and men to bring to the polls idiots and lunatics from the county poor-house, and so on to the end of the chapter. In short there was just as much sin at home as abroad, and when the lecturer came to analyze his own thoughts, sins, purposes, ambitions, he was astonished at the richness of the vein he developed in his own personality. He had all along mistaken dyspepsia for humility, obstinacy for devotion to principle, and conceit for righteousness generally. In recalling a recent dicker he found that within twenty-four hours he had told sixty lies direct, one hundred and thirty by implication, and had made two hundred misrepresentations. The next day he caught himself courting his neighbor's wife, and then making a glutton of himself at dinner. At church he found himself ruminating upon business transactions instead of listening to the sermon, and afterward bearing false witness. In short, he discovered the alarming fact that every day of his life he committed all the sins in the decalogue, and what humbled him was the fact that the knowledge that he had all these moral blemishes was not confined to himself. His discovery of the fact was recent—but his neighbors had always known it. Said the speaker: I at last found the MAN OF SIN. I was the man. I am now busily engaged in reforming—not the world, but myself, and I hope I am succeeding. I succeeded in checking myself in time to save four lies only yesterday—I am now correcting all errors in accounts that are in my favor—in short by dint of hard work and careful watching I have got to a point of excellence where it is perfectly safe to say that I am no longer distinctively "the Man of Sin." My hearers, all of you who try hard enough and watch closely enough, may in the course of a great many years, if you are gifted and have patience, get to be as good as I am. I know you will shrink from a task so apparently hopeless, but I assure the reward is great enough to justify the trial.

CHESTNUTTING

We waked in the dusky morning,
Ronald, and Rose, and I,
When the grass was crisp in the meadows,
And the stars were still in the sky;
And whispering softly together,
We crept down the creaking stair,
For we knew how the gusty weather
Was shaking the chestnuts bare.

The baskets hung by the chimney,
Little and big in a row;
"I'll take the bigger," said Ronald,
"For boys are strong, you know;
I can climb a tree like a squirrel,
And gather the ripest and best;
I can carry them home on my shoulder,
And never once stop to rest."

Hurrah! how the wind was blowing,
Fresh, and frosty, and keen,
As we ran with a shout through the fallows,
And the fields of stubble between;
We crossed the brook by the meadow,
We climbed the hill by the wood,
And there, in the brightening morning,
The ranks of the chestnuts stood.

So, ho! the gnarly old giants!
We called them goblins of old;
The nuts were their precious jewels,
The leaves were the yellow gold,
We plundered the prickly caskets,
Unlocked by the fairy frost,
And laughed as we heaped our baskets
With treasures the goblins lost.

We have all grown old together,
Ronald, and Rose, and I,
Yet oft in the autumn weather,
When the dawn is faint in the sky,
I start from my quiet dreaming,
And I think I can hear it still,
The sound of the chestnuts dropping
Far up on the windy hill.
—Little Corporal.

EXPLOSIVE AGENTS.—The caution that should be observed in storing away explosive agents in safe places is incalculated by an accident that occurred recently in Greenock, Scotland. Twelve young men took refuge from a shower in an unoccupied smith's shop. One of the young men in searching about the premises, discovered a tin box about a foot square, and another observed a small quantity of oil on the forge. These discoveries did not seem to be very important till a third member of the party picked up a hammer with which he struck a careless blow on the box. In an instant a terrible explosion took place, and the whole building and eleven of the unfortunate young men were blown to atoms.

Harrowing Confessions of the Elder Rooptentoot.

My "sands of life have nearly run out," to use the terse language of the inventor of Kangaroo Salve, but before I go to that bourne from whence return tickets are not issued, I would like to lift up my voice to the youth of the land, that they may shun if possible my fate. With these broken remarks we will make the following confession;

Years—yes, ages since—when my brow was less wrinkled than now, and when I was comparatively unsophisticated, I was asked in an unguarded moment to subscribe for "a beautiful illustrated history of the Universe." I hesitated, and was consequently lost, for during my hesitation a respected friend said "it would make a fine addition to your library." I succumbed at this, and put down my name for the "History," agreeing to pay for the same, twenty-five cents per month upon delivery of the work, and so on to its conclusion. If I had only stopped to enquire how many parts there were—but I anticipate.

As I said before, this was years—perhaps ages ago—and since then I have been waylaid monthly, and even semi-monthly, by the gentlemanly agent, who only left upon the payment of the customary "quarter." He has laid in wait for me at my office, routed me out of bed at night, stood at the vestibule of the church, and—but I digress again.

The history commenced with Adam, and has now reached to within a few years of the flood, and it is still coming with no prospect of conclusion, as the magnitude of the universe has greatly increased since the historian commenced his labors. For some time I read each number of the work, and gazed with gusto upon the portraits—which I have since learned are those of prominent characters which have appeared from time to time in the Police Gazette. For instance, the striking picture of Noah was originally the cut of Nicholas Bidwell, the murderer, who destroyed his wife and seventeen children in a fit of "momontary insanity." Now I simply look at the pictures—that is, I have casually glanced at the last page to see if there is any prospect of their completion; but there is none.

The History has already kicked up an awful domestic broil. My wife says whenever I bring a fresh armful of "monthly parts" home—"What' havn't you got through with that trash yet?" Owing to this prejudice on her part I have smuggled the last few hundred numbers home and hid them in the barn. My barn is now full—and I have got to rent another building or spoil the volume. Last week there came a double number, for which I paid fifty cents—this, thought I, is the last, especially as it contained an index and title page. I ran home with my thumb carefully concealing the price, (my wife growls considerable about that). Well, said I, with a triumphant air—I have my history complete now! She seized the "monthly part," and looking at the last page said in an ironical manner—"End of Volume 1st, complete in thirty-eight more volumes," Such indeed was the case. Last week another gentlemanly looking personage called, and asked if we had any books or pamphlets to bind. I took him to the barn, and said, "if you can cover that building with sheepskin or half calf at a reasonable rate you may do so."(this was intended as a joke). He spent four days counting the different parts of the history (at $5 per day), and said he would bind them in Turkey morocco for $200. The cheapness at once struck me, so I paid him on the spot. He is probably binding them in Turkey, or Asia, or some other foreign country, for I have never seen him since, and a friend of mine who was visiting a paper mill shortly afterward thinks he observed my history in the mash tub.

I am an old man now, and the "history" keeps coming. Will an ever benevolent public protect my children—or kill the publisher—I don't care which.

Yours historically,
JOHN ROOTENTOOT.

To the Martyrs of Liver Complaint.—Among the wonderful medical properties which have rendered Hostetter's Stomach Bitters pre-eminent among the health-restoring preparations of the age, its anti-bilious virtues are not the least remarkable. No words can do justice to its marvellous effect upon the convalescent sufferer, who describes it as "going right to the spot," tells the story as clearly as may be. It does go right to the spot. It operates directly upon the disordered organ, and whether unduly active or in a state of paralysis, restores it to a condition of health. The Sickness at the Stomach, pain between the Shoulders and in the Right Side, Yellow Suffusion of the Skin, Costiveness, Drowsiness and Langour, Dimness of Sight, Colic Palpitation of the Heart, Dry Cough, Low Fever, and other symptoms which indicate the various phases of Acute and Chronic Liver Complaint, are one and all promptly relieved, and finally removed, by the action of this famous preparation, which is at once the best of correctives, the gentlest, and most genial of aperients, an infallible regulator, and a powerful restorative. Persons of a bilious habit, who use the Bitters as a protective medicine, will never suffer the pains and penalties of Liver disease or Bilous Remittent Fever.

AN ORDINANCE.
Fixing the Boundary Line of Arch street.

Be it enacted and ordained by the Common Council of the City of Titusville, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same,

That hereafter the boundary lines of Arch street, between Franklin street and an alley, seventy-five (75) feet east of Franklin street, shall be as follows:

The north line of Arch street shall be at a post and corner one hundred and fifty (150) feet south from the south line of Spring street (beginning at the southeast corner of Spring and Franklin streets.) The width of said Arch street is hereby established to be forty (40) feet, making the south side of said Arch street one hundred and ninety (190) feet south from the aforesaid corner of Spring and Franklin streets, and the said north and south lines of said Arch street shall run thence east to said alley seventy-five (75) feet from Franklin street, in lines parallel with the lines of Spring and Water streets; and all former surveys and established lines upon Arch street—that is, at what is now called the west end of said Arch street—are hereby changed to as above described.
W. W. BLOSS, Pres't of Council.
Passed in Council September 28, 1870.
Attest: GEO. A. CHASE, City Clerk.
Approved, October —th, 1870.
